COMMUNITY EMPOWERMENT IN RURAL ASIA

This book is a compilation of the Eurasia Lecturer Series, a cross-perspective forum that brings together academic thought, field experience, and global discourse in a productive dialogue space. The themes raised reflect a diversity of perspectives: from the philosophical and psychological concepts of empowerment, as offered through the lens of Sigmund Freud's thinking and the GEDSI approach, to aspects of policy and village governance in the context of Yogyakarta's special autonomy and the utilization of village funds.

Not only does it delve into policy discourse, but this book also highlights the socio-cultural dimensions of empowerment, emphasizing the role of local wisdom, indigenous movements, and the influence of global pop culture, such as the Korean wave, which unexpectedly became a language of diplomacy and a medium of international solidarity. Additionally, the section on economic innovation and digital transformation in community empowerment offers fresh perspectives on new ways to build independence in the era of technological disruption. All of this culminates in a more applicative discussion on ecological sustainability, spatial justice, and the transformation of rural communities in the context of demographics and nature-based tourism.

The arrangement of this book consciously follows the trajectory from conceptualization to real action—starting from the theoretical foundation, moving into the policy realm, reinforced by a socio-cultural basis, driven by innovation, and realized in contextual and sustainable practices. We hope this approach not only provides information but also inspires readers to take part in a more humane, inclusive, and just empowerment movement.
